Making Space for Prayer

The Spirit of the Lord is upon me because God has anointed me to bring glad tidings to the poor, to proclaim liberty to captives and recovery of sight to the blind, to let the oppressed go free, and to proclaim a year acceptable to the Lord.

Luke 4:18-19

All faithful endeavors begin in prayer. The way we pray informs the way we live, and the way we live shapes the way we pray. Before examining the logistics and challenges of coordinating this discipleship journey into Gospel-adjusted living, clear some space for a moment of prayer. Allow the compassionate Spirit of Jesus to guide your hopes and shape your expectations. Trust that, although it takes your hands, your heart, and your work to form a J-Walking group, it is God's movement through you that allows the work to be done.

Come, Spirit of justice; overwhelm us.

Fill our hungry hearts.

Ignite in us the fire of compassion.

Reshape our lives and send us out to restore and renew the beauty of your Creation.

(Pause and repeat)

General Information

Welcome to JusticeWalking (J-Walking), an initiation into gospel living!

This step-by-step guide is intended for adults who plan to coordinate a J-Walking group in their diocese, parish, or high school. You should already be generally familiar with the J-Walking process and its core components.

The JustFaith Ministries staff is available to walk with you throughout the planning and implementation phases of the program. We are available by phone or email to answer your questions and consult with you on any issue or concern you might have. We hope that you connect with us as you need!

Please read through this entire document and then follow the steps outlined below to launch your J-Walking group.

Please note that you must re-register your group with JustFaith Ministries each year, even if you have registered and done the program in a previous program year.

Step One: Choose Coordinators

J-Walking builds covenant community with all participants – younger and older. The process is founded on the support and guidance of two coordinators.

J-Walking is founded on the support and guidance of two coordinators. The ideal arrangement is one adult coordinator paired with one college student. J-Walking coordinators encourage participation, inspire prophetic insight, and set the tone for the process. They model commitment for the other J-Walkers.

The most important qualities of a JW coordinator include:

- the ability to truly listen to young people and receive their wisdom with faith
- the willingness to affirm or challenge a group to go deeper and stretch boundaries

Who might be an adult J-Walking facilitator?

- College student with ministry/social justice experience
- Campus minister
- Professor/teacher/staff member
- JustFaith Ministries program graduate
- Volunteer in campus ministry

If you have no direct experience in ministry with youth, seek the guidance and support of a youth minister or teacher.*

Before implementing the following steps, coordinators should identify a general start and end date for the process.

Step Two: Form a Group of Advisors (Optional)

This optional step is intended to cultivate ongoing support of JusticeWalking coordinators.

A supportive group of adults that meets periodically will enhance the J-Walking experience, especially for the J-Walking coordinators. Create an advisory group by compiling a list of potentially interested adults, such as graduates of JustFaith Ministries programs, pastors, principals, campus ministers, parish or diocesan staff, teachers, and others:

- Personally invite four or five of these people to meet with you.
- Outline the J-Walking process for them.
- Invite those gathered to consider serving as advisors: committing to two or three meetings over the course of the journey. A first meeting could include offering assistance to the coordinators as they establish a J-Walking group. At subsequent meetings, advisors may listen to coordinators' stories of success or struggle and offer support or advice as needed.

Step Three: Find a Sponsoring Agency

J-Walking builds community within a receptive campus, parish, or diocesan office.

This organization provides a gathering place and a broader community with whom J-Walkers can share the journey. It also guarantees oversight and support, especially in screening adults and providing insurance coverage. J-Walking is designed to complement existing campus, parish, or diocesan ministry; many of the gatherings should be located on campus or church property.

Use the promotional materials from the Promotion Toolkit to explain the J-Walking process to interested campus staff, faculty, or diocesan staff. Make the following points:

- J-Walking creates a small community of adults and young people who try to integrate the gospel message and the challenges of Catholic social teaching into their lives.

- J-Walking is a program of JustFaith Ministries. JustFaith Ministries works in partnership with Catholic Relief Services, the Catholic Campaign for Human Development, Bread for the World, and Maryknoll Affiliates (with additional support from Catholic Charities USA).
- J-Walking does not replace religious studies or youth ministry; it is a discipleship process that will deepen and broaden existing spiritual formation efforts.
- J-Walking groups are self-sustaining and require minimal oversight from the sponsoring agency.
- If you live in an area where J-Walking has been offered in the past, invite someone who has completed the program to speak firsthand. Personal stories of transformation are powerful resources to use when talking about the program.

Step Four: Choose a Meeting at the Margins Site

Every other session of J-Walking is held at a local social service agency. These are known as the Meeting at the Margins sessions.

The core purpose of Meeting at the Margins sessions is to form relationships with people J-Walkers may not otherwise meet. These visits are NOT service opportunities; rather, they are invitations to share life together and learn the names, faces, and stories of those on the margins.

Selecting and contacting the agency are the J-Walking coordinators' responsibility, and must be accomplished before scheduling the J-Walking calendar. Each community will offer its own unique possibilities. Some of these might be:

- eating at a soup kitchen and talking with clients
- playing games with residents at a low-income nursing home
- tutoring refugees or immigrants at an ESL school
- sharing activities with developmentally disabled adults at a day care center
- doing crafts with folks at an addiction recovery center
- offering child care at a family homeless shelter
- participating in a weekly potluck dinner at a Catholic Worker House
- spending time with students at an after-school program in a poor neighborhood

Please refer to the Meeting at the Margins document for a more detailed introduction to the Meeting at the Margins sessions and for more detailed instructions on how to select and contact an agency with which to partner.

Step Five: Find a Meeting Space

J-Walkers need a gathering space, such as a meeting room or classroom, for regular two-hour sessions.

J-Walkers meet for seven sessions. These meetings can be scheduled on a weekly or bi-weekly basis. Only three of the seven sessions are located at the parish or school; every other meeting takes place at a social service agency with which the group forms a relationship (see Step Four).

Any multi-purpose room that is small enough to foster a sense of intimacy for prayer and dialogue will work well as a meeting site. The setting for J-Walking gatherings is a small circle of people, seated on chairs or directly on the floor. Avoid sitting at tables, or in any arrangement that breaks up the circle. Request permission to rearrange tables and chairs for your gatherings.

Step Six: Set a Program Schedule

J-Walkers make time for what matters most. People lead busy lives and struggle with conflicting school, work, and social commitments, but not all of these commitments bear equal weight or merit.

J-Walking coordinators should determine the timeline before inviting prospective participants into the process. Participants should be aware of the demands and benefits of this long-term commitment before entering into the process. A J-Walking schedule is provided in this document to assist you in putting together a program timeline.

Session Dates

Be attentive to school and parish calendars, and seek the advice of professors or parish staff to avoid conflicts. Planning sessions around a regular pattern enables J-Walking to become a natural part of the rhythm of life. For example, J-Walkers might meet for the ‘at-home’ sessions on Wednesdays at 7:00 PM, while alternating sessions (Meetings at the Margins) meet on Saturdays at noon at a local soup kitchen.

Planning Retreats and the Public Dialogue

Three retreat experiences are incorporated into J-Walking: the Opening Retreat, the JusticeWalking Pilgrimage, and the Closing Retreat. Retreats are vital to the experience and each fulfills a unique purpose. Any attempt to bypass or shorten these retreats will seriously impact the quality of the J-Walking experience. Please use the J-Walking Schedule to assist you in selecting dates for the retreats.

An opportunity for J-Walkers to share their experience of transformation is built into the process. The Public Dialogue is a forum in which peers, families, teachers, and other community members gather to hear participants’ prophetic witness. Securing a space and planning for this event well in advance will empower J-Walkers to spend time tapping their wells of wisdom to offer inspiration to others.

Committing to a Schedule

Committing to a process requires personal sacrifice for the benefit of all. Participants will need to make space for J-Walking. This is a counter-cultural message. As with commitments to studies, sports, and extracurricular activities, participants remain faithful when teachers, mentors, and ministers support and affirm their efforts.

Flexible Scheduling

J-Walking sessions can be scheduled weekly or bi-weekly. J-Walkers are expected to read, reflect, and journal between meetings. Since this is an intensive process, you are advised to insert breaks to make space for “down-time.” Encourage J-Walkers to organize occasional social gatherings to deepen community and enjoy the blessing of each other’s company.

Step Seven: Form a J-Walking Group

The size of a J-Walking group varies between seven and twelve people.

In contrast to our cultural bias for activities “en masse,” J-Walking imitates Jesus’ invitational model of a small, hand-chosen band of companions. The task now turns to recruiting a small group of young adults. Resist the temptation to enlarge the group beyond twelve members. If a large number of people apply, look for additional adults to coordinate a second J-Walking group.

Introduce J-Walking to young people by making general and personal invitations. Use the promotional resources to make announcements for parish bulletins, school newsletters, or the diocesan newspaper. Announcements are most effective when followed by a personal invitation.

Personal Invitations

People – young and old – respond most readily to a personal connection. Pattern your invitation after Jesus’ example: call people by name and challenge them to put aside life’s entanglements to walk together as disciples. If possible, ask young people who have already experienced J-Walking to make a presentation at a youth event or class.

Keep these points in mind:

- Be direct about the limited size of the J-Walking group. Avoid accepting nominations to bolster the number of participants. It is better to have five committed people than twelve who are willing to “give it a try.”
- Be clear that this process is not for everyone, only for those who want it. J-Walking is counter-cultural and demanding, not for those who are mildly interested. Participants must choose willingly to enter into the process.
- Be honest about the level of commitment expected. Motivated people tend to over-commit and spread their lives thinly. Offer the challenge to make time for this process as a priority, rather than trying to find time to “fit it in.”
- Be attentive to signs of interest expressed by the potential participants. Follow up with an invitation to answer questions.
- Make sure that the application deadline is clear. Allow everyone at least two weeks to respond.

Step Eight: Register with JustFaith Ministries

Visit our website or call our office to renew your user license each program year.

Our staff is always available to help accompany you in this process.

Step Nine: Host an Informational Meeting

Schedule the Informational Meeting three to four weeks in advance of the time you intend to begin the J-Walking process.

This hour-long information session should be a prayerful time, offering participants a taste of what lies ahead. Request the use of a room at the sponsoring agency for this meeting, ideally in what will become the regular J-Walking gathering space. Inform participants of the date, time, and location of this meeting when you notify them of their acceptance into the process. If possible, coordinators may want to have a copy of the J-Walking books and other resources to display at this meeting. Invite potential participants to bring their calendars or planners.

Walking in the Reign

J-Walkers join a wider group of seekers, walking confidently against the flow into a world where God's compassionate justice reigns.

It is the Spirit, and the passion of our convictions, that draws people into community and inspires us to choose uncommon paths toward abundant life. May you be guided through prayer to committed discipleship and led into life-affirming relationships along the margins of society.
